CEO's Foreword

Dental Health Foundation Ireland

2024 was a busy and challenging year. It showed just how resilient and adaptable the Dental Health Foundation (DHF) team truly is. Our figures (successes and impacts) tell one story, behind them lies the energy, passion, and commitment of our staff, Trustees, volunteers, and partners, all of whom worked together to ensure our mission stayed strong.

Our Mission: Optimum Oral Health for All

At the core of everything we do is a simple but powerful idea — that every interaction is an opportunity to support someone in making better oral health choices. We're here to empower people and families to consider meaningful oral health behaviour change that supports lifelong wellbeing, with practical, evidence-based information.

Navigating a Tough Economic Landscape

Following the loss of a long-standing government funding source in 2023, we shifted gear, reassessed priorities, continued strategic practice, and stayed focused on our key goals.

Despite this, demand for our resources continued to grow — a testament to the relevance and quality of our work. We also launched our new online shop, giving people an opportunity to support the Foundation while accessing practical items like toothbrushes, tooth timers, and non-sugar-based rewards for patients in practices and children in primary schools. Sometimes, a treat does not have to be sweet!

Fundraising Scope

We engaged 2 into 3 fundraising consultants to work with us on our Capital Campaign and Feasibility Study. In response to the Government funding cut and increasing need to promote oral health in Ireland, we developed three key initiatives to directly advance oral health. To run these campaigns, the DHF will need to raise 700k over a three-year period.

New Faces and Fresh Ideas

A highlight of the year was welcoming our first group of interns, from Ireland and abroad. They contributed to resource development and brought new perspectives into our work. Our workshops, too, evolved to be more engaging and participative, encouraging attendees to think critically about their oral health in creative ways.

Steady Progress and Strong Results

Major achievements included the release of the 3rd edition of Oral Health in Ireland: A Handbook for Health Professionals, developed in collaboration with the Oral Health Research Centre at University College Cork. We were also thrilled to have our Caring for Your Child's Teeth (0–5 years) brochure shortlisted at the Irish Healthcare Awards. We continued our work on a new parent resource, Oral Health for Autistic Children, set to launch in 2025, and kicked off a capital campaign with a feasibility study — laying the groundwork for long-term growth.

Meaningful Community Connections

From oral health information days at the National Drug Treatment Centre to hands-on workshops in communities across Ireland, 2024 was filled with moments that reminded us of the power of small steps. Whether it's someone picking up a toothbrush after years of dental anxiety or a child learning how to brush properly for the first time, these moments matter.

Our outreach is growing — and so is engagement. Participants at our events often share stories, build connections, and reflect together on how oral health fits into their overall wellbeing.

Turning Challenges into Opportunities

Each challenge enabled an opportunity to pause, reflect, and innovate. How do we better serve? What can we improve? How do we keep our mission front and centre in a changing world?

The answers often came through collaboration, creativity, and a willingness to try something new.

Our highly productive Board Away Day at the end of the year, anchored our new strategy for 2025-2027 with new ideas to broaden our scope and begin our fundraising journey.

We were sorry to lose our long time Trustee and stalwart supporter, Dr Paddy Crotty, who retired after more than 20 years with the organisation. His energy and enthusiasm, and wonderful sense of humour will be greatly missed. We all wish him the very best in his retirement.

Looking to 2025 and Beyond

We enter 2025 with renewed energy and focus. Our top priorities? Strengthening our fundraising efforts, expanding our partnerships, and continuing to innovate in how we deliver resources and education.

The Irish oral health landscape will keep evolving — and so will we. But no matter what changes come, our mission remains the same: promoting oral health and wellbeing for everyone, at every stage of life.

To our incredible team, our volunteers, our partners, and everyone who supported us in 2024 — thank you. Together, we're making a difference.

CEO

About Us

The Dental Health Foundation (DHF) is Ireland's only independent charity solely dedicated to improving oral health and wellbeing. Since our establishment in 1977, we have led the way in oral health promotion, working closely with the Health Service Executive (HSE), the Department of Health, schools, and community organisations to advocate for better oral health outcomes nationwide.

Oral health is a vital part of overall wellbeing—it enables us to speak, smile, eat, and live with confidence. Our mission is to promote oral health across the life course through education, advocacy, and the provision of accessible, evidence-based resources.

To achieve this, we:

- Develop and distribute free oral health resources for the public and professionals.
- Collaborate with community and healthcare organisations to support local initiatives.
- Support schools in integrating oral health into their curricula.
- Contribute to national policy development through strategic partnerships.
- Publish professional resources, such as Oral Health in Ireland: 3rd Edition.
- Support professional development through bursaries and awards.

Our work is guided by five core values:

- Care – We are mindful of people's needs and concerns.
- Respect – We honour diverse backgrounds, beliefs, and abilities.
- Trust – We build trust through collaboration and transparency.
- Quality – We strive for excellence through research and evaluation.
- Innovation – We embrace creative, cost-effective approaches to achieve impact.

We also contributed the article “From Bump to Toddler” to Pregnancy and Parenting magazine, highlighting the importance of oral health from pregnancy through early childhood.

From Bump to toddler

Strong baby teeth are a great start to your baby's overall health and play an important role in how your child's social and emotional development and how he/she learns to chew, talk, and have a bright smile.

What you need to know

Top oral health recommendations

for your children's mouth, teeth and gums

Good oral health is a human right and vital to children's wellbeing. Prevention is essential for healthy teeth, gums and to avoid injury to front teeth.

Current views on oral health for children align with general health principles. They emphasise prevention, rather than addressing problems once they occur. This involves a common risk factor approach to prevention.

Common childhood oral conditions

Tooth decay is the most common chronic disease of childhood, affecting around 60%–90% of school-aged children globally. It's a common reason for young children attending hospital and receiving treatment under general anaesthesia.

Other common conditions include inflamed gums, dental erosion and injury to front teeth. All these conditions are preventable by the following advice, using a common risk factor approach and ensuring early dental visits to detect potential problems.

Recommendations for a healthy mouth

Eat/drink as little sugars as possible. Particularly avoid foods/drinks sweetened with sugars between meals and at bedtime. Avoid fizzy drinks, whether identified as sugar-free or not. Plain milk and tap water are the best drinks for healthy teeth.

Brush teeth twice a day using fluoride toothpaste from age two. Spit, don't rinse, after brushing. Supervise brushing at least until age seven. For older children, ask your dentist or dental professional about use of floss and interdental brushes. Don't smoke/vape, or discontinue if already started. Wear a mouthguard when playing contact sports, during both competitive and training games.

These recommendations not only support a healthy mouth, teeth and gums but also contribute to overall health. This common risk factor approach is recommended by the national oral health policy 'Smile agus Sláinte' and by the World Health Organization.

Medication and toothpaste advice

Some medications can contain sugars. Always choose sugar-free options when available. Inform your dentist about all medicines your child is taking. Some children enjoy the taste of toothpaste. Always supervise brushing, using only a pea-sized amount. Avoid letting your child eat, lick or swallow toothpaste. For children under seven years, use toothpaste with 1,000ppm fluoride. Those over seven may use a toothpaste with 1,450ppm. Follow the guidance unless your dental professional says otherwise.
